TRACTION MOVE MAY FALL FLAT

Legality of Utah Light & Railway Bill is Questioned.

COURT ATTACK POSSIBLE

CITY IS IN POSITION TO DRIVE GOOD BARGAIN.

Fearing the validity of the consolidaions that were made at the time of ad prior to the formation of the Utah ght & Railway company may be atgetting its franchise extension ordiance through the council, the comany has caused a bill to legalize the solidations to be introduced in the schate. It is designated as senate bill No. 52 and is fathered by Mr. Hollingsworth. In order to determine the legality of this measure a city official 3 been delving into the constitution the state of Utah. He found proof onvincing to him that the bill will b Constitutional if passed and signed Governor John C. Cutler. Section

"No railroad corporation shall con-solidate its stock, property or fran-chises with any other railroad corpo-tation owning a competing line." Decision of the Court.

"The claim may be set up by the offi-cials of the Utah Light & Railway company," said the city official, "that that street railways are railroads in law, and subject to the same restric-tions by state, county and city govern-ments. So if that contention is made

Should the Utah Light & Railway company claim immunity from the provisions of the section of the constitution forbidding consolidation of railroad companies because it is not a steam railroad company, it would adnit while doing so that it would be entitled to no relief under this bill be-cause it, like the constitution, refers to 'railroad companies.'"

These are the railroad franchises that were absorbed by the Utah Light & Railway company, together with several gas and electric light franchises: Franchise to Salt Lake City Railroad company, franchise to L. C. Hamilton, franchise to Salt Lake Rapid Transit company, franchise to Payer Language franchise fransit company, franchise to Popuer-on Place & Fort Douglas Rapid Tran-it company, franchise to C. E. It is said that the graining of a new franchise is of the highest importance to the company, merely to protect rights already granted, that the corporation needs it bad enough so it could afford to spend a large amount of money "persuading" councilmen, and that the councilmen and mayor are in a position to drive a good bargain with the company, securing many con-

Music and Drama

From either standpoint, size or cleverness, "Mother Goose" measures to the lightest standards. In point of size it is he greatest company ever seen in the salt Lake theatre. The splendid lines are need the delightful surprises in "Mother loose." One gets so accustomed to seeing nectacular productions consisting solely a spectacles, that it is double measure in meet one that surpasses, not in spectual reatures alone, but in the lines, ne dialogue is far from being the weak of in "Mother Goose." Most of it resives around Joe Cawthorn, naturally, we he so arranges his affairs that nother the section of the section of on and the others were trained localr the engagement.

e of the noticeable features of the action is that despite the great numof people to handle everything goes a mechanical quickness and exactthat is truly surprising. No halts, ausses, no hitches. The changes come
go with a snap,
ere are a few changes in "Mother te." by the way. There are thirteen rate scenes in the three acts, employeighty-seven drop curtains, manipui by a stage force of 110.
e stage settings are of the most gors description and the ballet not only largest but one of the best trained here for many a long day. Some of o admire one need not waste time on rifles.

Why the piece was called "Mother Boose" nobody appears to know. The lame does as well as any other would, be met ast night was somewhat unlike the one we met in picture books a few years back. The one of last night was a coarse old ady of doubtful nativity. One moment four were led to believe she was of German extraction. a moment later you loubted that, and after the third moment you didn't care, but were content to let with the commisses, there is, nevertheless, a plot in "Mother Goose." Not much of a plot, to be sure, but a kind of plot.

"Mother Goose." Not much of a plot, to be sure, but a kind of plot.

"Heatsease." a fairly queen, argues to the Demon King that there is one conented mortal, and names "Mother Goose." The demon says the old lady an't stand prosperity, so Heartsease ends a goose that is to stay with "Mother Goose." laying golden eggs all the time, o long as the old lady is contented.

Of course "Mother Goose" buys a big louse and tries to butt into society.

where she doesn't fit any to speak of. But she doesn't know enough to realize she is off her beat until the demon drops in again to inform her concerning the extremely obvious facts that she is old, ugly and vulgar. "Mother Goose" so not longer contented. She wants to be pretty, so the demon puts her on to a spring that will do the work. When "Mother Goose" appears after drinking from the spring she gravely informs all the world that she is beautiful, which, with all respect to Mr. Cawthorn, is, we submit, still a debatable question.

However, this evidence of discontent causes the goose to desert the old woman, who has to join the army to make a living. In the last act, through the unselfish devotion of "Mother Goose's" daughter's true lover the magic goose is again brought into the family, and all is well. Incidental to all this Mr. Cawthorn and is able coadjutors work in any amount of funny stuff. They had the house shaking a good bit of the time last night. While Mr. Cawthorn is, of course, the "main gee," as the poet says, he does not grable everything like some head comedians we might name. He gives Messrs. Kelly, Macart and Crawford lots of room to throw themselves and the four constitute an able comic quartette.

Of the musical numbers Cawthorn's topical songs and "Laughing Water," by Corinne and chorus were the popular numbers. The Indian Maiden chorus and the unique way in which it was put on heiped the latter number greatly. There is too much in "Mother Goose" to enumerate. The production has not been overadvertised.

Last night's audience filled all the seats from the top of the house to the bottom. The production continues through the balance of the week, with matinees today and Saturday.

Governor Cutler, attended by his mili-tary staff in uniform, was conspicuous in one of the stalls at the "Mother loose" production last night.
